

Five Resources for Family Engagement: Resources for Parents of High School Students

Engaging families to support student learning is an important role for 21st Century Community Learning Centers (21st CCLC). These five free resources will provide you with material to give to parents that will help with them support their high school students.

1. The Learning Community: Parent School Involvement in Middle and High School This site offers a series of tips for families to support their middle and high school students' learning. <http://www.thelearningcommunity.us/tweens-and-teens/parent-school-involvement.aspx>
2. Family Education: Resources for Parents - The High School Years This is a list of books for parents that can help them support their high school student. <http://school.familyeducation.com/high-school/parenting/37642.html>
3. Discovery Education Free student resources that bring learning to life – interactive games, videos, contests, virtual labs and activities designed to help teens dive deeper into a topic and have fun too. <http://www.discoveryeducation.com/students/>
4. National Association for College Admission Counseling: Student and Parent Resources This site offers guidance for families and high school students as they prepare to navigate the college application and admission process. <http://www.nacacnet.org/studentinfo/Pages/Default.aspx>
5. Michigan's Resources for Parents A resource from the department of Education to help parents build a strong family-school partnership. http://www.michigan.gov/documents/mde/file3basicssp_secured_364733_7.pdf