Provisional Certification:

Candidate instructors who successfully complete the course will be issued a provisional certification which will allow them to co-teach in classroom and teach restricted In-vehicle coursework for a period of one year within your organization.

Once all of the candidate instructor requirements are met (within one year), your instructor will be able to apply for full certification.

The provisional certification does not transfer to another provider and is not renewable.
The Provider Model

Benefits:
1. Gets a candidate instructor “on the ground” faster than the standard training model. Candidate instructors begin co-teaching sooner.
2. The standard course schedule doesn’t always meet a provider’s needs. As a provider, this model allows you to train your candidate instructors on your timeline.
3. As a provider, you will be able to evaluate your candidate instructor throughout the training program and provide the necessary guidance and feedback to ensure they are the right fit for this profession and your program.
4. Provider’s philosophy understood by student. Providers can include their standard new employee orientation into the training program.
5. The Provider Model relies heavily on co-teaching experience under the supervision of a mentor. Therefore, the Candidate Instructor receives much more practice and opportunity for improvement than the standard model.
